c. Abstract:

The Puget Sound Transportation Panel is the first general-purpose travel panel survey in an urban area in the United States. Initiated in 1989 by the Puget Sound Council of Governments (now the Puget Sound Regional Council), it is similar in design and direction to the Dutch National Mobility Panel, but is also descended from the long line of cross-section urban travel surveys in U.S. metropolitan areas and is more focused on the transportation and transit policy issues in U.S. cities.

Subsequent waves have taken place in 1992, 1993, 1994, 1996, 1997, 1999, and 2000, all conducted in the fall except for the 1996 and 1999 surveys, which was conducted in the spring of those years. Attitude and Value questionnaires were conducted along with the 1993, 1996, 1997, 1999, and 2000 waves.
